

Livable. Diverse. Unique. Transit Oriented Communities (TOCs) are walkable neighborhoods to live, work, shop, play, and learn – designed to make using transit easy and convenient, resulting in less driving. TOCs can provide a diversity of jobs, housing types, and economic opportunities for all, while enhancing existing communities and providing affordable housing choices. Accelerating a coordinated and cooperative TOC planning process is key to achieving the vision communities and cities across Silicon Valley have set for the future.

VTA's BART extension through Downtown San José and Santa Clara presents a unique opportunity to leverage organized growth around high-quality transit in Silicon Valley.

Want to learn more about how VTA is engaging your community and working with your city to build Transit Oriented Communities?

Check out our website: www.vta.org/bart/tocs

Transit Oriented Communities

VTA's BART Silicon Valley Phase II Extension Project

April 2019